JUROR: Carol Prusa

Carol Prusa received her BS at the University of Illinois and an MFA in Painting & drawing at Drake University, Iowa. She presently is teaching drawing and painting in the Master's Program at F. A. U.

What makes this exhibition particularly wonderful is it is from my own community. Art can inspire us to persevere in our daily lives or to slow down and reflect on our lives. Much of this exhibition looks at nature; animals and landscapes. I awarded first prize to a set of three paintings each showing a graceful bird painted in loose pools of thin pigment within a structure of drawing. The luminous painted field feels like the watery environment of the bird and the muted colors reflect the calm stability of bird. Second prize went to powerfully stroked, intensely pigmented, impasto paint that generated a mountain – the painting is as much about paint as it is about mountain. It offers ideas to the strength and vitality of who we are. Third place went to a peaceful landscape activated by white lines. This painting caused my breathing to slow down. The Juror's award went to a photograph that subtly captured the texture and tranquility of a Florida landscape. Honorable mention went to an expression of a local environment painted so effectively I knew it was Yamato Scrub without reading the title. In a day of information overload and another crisis, these paintings provide respite and offer a sense of the resiliency and beauty of life. Each of these artists presented something I have seen before but in a fresh consistent language. They were personal and well made. All the work in the exhibition is to be celebrated.
